

Cleaner air

The further out into the country you get, the more your air quality improves. Researchers have a few ideas for why this might be, including less pollution, greater abundance of trees and grass.

Pollution in more heavily-populated areas comes not only from a lack of greenery, but also tiny yet harmful particles released into the air, from trucks, buses, cars and factories.

- Hi, welcome to Burger Shack! How can I help you today?
- Yes, I'd like a double/triple cheeseburger. And hold the pickles
- Would you like some French-fries with that?
- Yes, please.
- What size?
- Small/medium/large/Extra large.
- Would you like something to drink with that?
- Yes, I'll have a large cola.
- How about an apple pie with that?
- That sounds appealing. I'll have one.
- Would that be all?
- Yes, thank you.
- So, that's one double cheese burger, hold the pickles, small fries, large cola and one apple pie, that comes to five ninety nine.
- Here you go.
